

What is a Hope Card?

Washington's Hope Card Program offers individuals an easier way to carry vital information about their full orders of protection.

Instead of always carrying a full civil protection order with you, you can keep the smaller, durable, and more accessible Hope Card. Hope Cards are available to anyone issued a protection order, including minor children, and are completely free.

The card includes all the information law enforcement needs to verify the protection order if a potential violation occurs, including the following:

- The name of the person restrained and their identifying information
- The names of protected people
- The protection order case number and issuing court
- The protection order's issuance and expiration dates

A Hope Card isn't a substitute for a protection order, and you must already have a full protection order to request a Hope Card. Requesting a Hope Card at the following link or QR code is not an application for a protection order.

If you already have a full (not temporary) protection order, use the information on your protection order paperwork to fill out the Hope Card request.

You can request a Hope Card, or a replacement card if lost, without cost to you at Washington Hope Card Program or by utilizing the QR code below.
