3. Legal Authority

I ask the court to redact or seal the specific information or documents listed above based on:

General Rule (GR) 15(c)(2): Courts may seal or redact court records based on findings made in writing that the sealing or redaction is necessary and based on privacy rights or safety concerns that outweigh the public interest in access to the court record.

Seattle Times Co. v. Ishikawa, 97 Wn.2d 30, 640 P.2d 716 (1982): In this case, the Washington Supreme Court ruled that courts must look at 5 factors when deciding whether to seal or limit access to documents in the court file:

1. the person who wants to limit access must make a showing of “serious and imminent threat to some other important interest”;
2. anyone present for the hearing must be given an opportunity disagree with the suggested restriction;
3. the method for limiting access must be the least restrictive way to protect the interests threatened;

4. the court must balance the interests of the person who wants to limit access with the public's right to know what has happened in court; and
5. the order must be limited in application and time to serve its purpose.

State v. Waldon, 148 Wn. App. 952, 202 P.3d 325 (2009): In this case, the Washington Court of Appeals ruled that courts must apply GR 15 and the factors listed above from the Ishikawa case when deciding whether to seal court records.

Evidence Rule (ER) 412(d)(1)-(2): This rule requires a party that wants to submit information about the other party's sexual history to file a written motion with the court at least 14 days before the hearing. The motion must specifically describe what information the party wants to provide to the court and why. The court must review the information in private to decide whether to admit it in court. Until the court orders differently, the motion and its related documents must also remain sealed.

And the following other legal authority (if any):
