Overview

The South County Recycling and Transfer Station opened in 2026, replacing the neighboring 60-year-old Algona Transfer Station. The new station utilizes modern features to control light, sound and odor at the site. Compacting equipment and additional driving lanes move vehicles through the facility quickly and reduce the number of trucks coming to and from the location each day. The station also features sustainable construction materials, rainwater collection systems, and solar panels that offset more than 50% of the station's electrical needs.
