

A word cloud centered around the word "welcome". The word "welcome" is the largest and most prominent, written in a bold, orange-red font. Surrounding it are various translations of "welcome" in different languages, written in either orange-red or grey. The words are oriented in various directions: some are horizontal, some are vertical, and some are rotated. The background is white with a faint, light blue watermark of the word "welcome" in a large, thin font.

What's on your heart today?

Land and enslaved people acknowledgment

We invite you to recognize the written histories of the United States as fractured.

We are on the traditional land of the Coast Salish people, whose communities lived here for generations and who continue to be systematically erased by policies and practices that remove their histories from this place. We honor their past and continued stewardship of this land.

We acknowledge that the United States was built off the stolen labor of kidnapped African people. Much of what we know of this country today—its culture, economic growth, and development—has been made possible by the labor of enslaved Africans and their descendants, who suffered the horrors of the trans-Atlantic human trafficking, chattel slavery, and Jim Crow. We are indebted to their labor and sacrifices, and we acknowledge the tremors of violence throughout generations that can still be felt today.

We recognize that these difficult histories persist in present-day racial realities and privileges in our nation. We commit to dismantling this racism in all spaces of our work and lives.
