PAO Case Info Application

Searching for a Case on the PAO Case Info Application

1. This is the Case Information search screen. To locate a suspect's or defendant's case, several search methods are available, with the most common being a Name Search. Other options include Court Case # (with hyphens), UCN (a new identifier replacing the CCN), Report #, etc. In the example below, the Last Name and First Name are used for the search. After entering the criteria, select the Search button.
2. Use the Court button to access past and upcoming court dates where you are assigned as a witness.

3. If a defendant record is found, the search results screen will appear. In the example below, searching by the defendant's Last Name and First Name yields multiple cases listed in the lower half of the screen. The defendant's name is not clickable on this screen. Verify the suspect or defendant using the identifiers, then click on the File # to access the specific Case.

4. If a defendant record is not found, you will see the following screen. The defendant's name or identifier used in the search, did not match a record in PAO's case management system.

Note: When searching, always use the most simplistic search terms, i.e. without the middle initial or middle name of the person. For names such as Michael/Mike, James/Jim, etc. search all related nicknames and possible spelling variations.

- When searching punctuation/spacing and salutation matters.
- Periods do make a difference in searches, but capitalization does not

The screenshot shows a web application interface for searching party information. The title bar reads "Search - Party Search Result" and includes a user profile icon, "TestCase, Officer", and a "Logout" link. The main content area contains two empty search result tables. The first table has columns: Name, UCN, Address, Status, DL Number, Race, Sex, DOB, and Phone Number. The second table has columns: Jurisdiction, File #, Court #, Report #, Charge, Type, Issued, Status, Stage, and Disp Date. An "Exit" button is located at the bottom left of the interface.
